four Indonesian women,” he said yesterday.

Inspections found that the detainees lacked travel documents or had overstayed.

Rusdi said the operation was launched following intelligence and public complaints about migrants living in shophouses and residences.

“The raids were carried out while the suspects were resting in the premises.

“Some tried to flee and hide on rooftops, but we managed to catch them.”

The suspects have been placed at the Setia Tropika Immigration Depot for investigation and legal action.
